<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>English</th>
<th>Italian</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>We were seated at breakfast one morning, my wife and I, when the maid brought in a telegram. It was from Sherlock Holmes and ran in this way:</td>
<td>Ni sidis uldie por frua-dejunajo, mea spozino e me, kande la servistino adportis telegramo. Oi esis de Sherlock Holmes, e me lektis tale:</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Have you a couple of days to spare? Have just been wired for from the west of England in connection with Boscombe Valley tragedy. Shall be glad if you will come with me. Air and scenery perfect. Leave Paddington by the 11:15.&quot;</td>
<td>«Ka tu havas kelka dii disponebla? On jus telegrafis a me pri la tragedio di valo Boscombe. Me joyos se tu akompanos me. Aero e peizajo esos perfekta. Livez Paddington-staciono per la 11.15 treno.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;What do you say, dear?&quot; said my wife, looking across at me. &quot;Will you go?&quot;</td>
<td>«Quon tu pensas pri to, karo?» dicis mea spozino, regardante me. «Ka tu iros?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;I really don't know what to say. I have a fairly long list at present.&quot;</td>
<td>«Me reale ne savas. Me prezente havas pasable longa listo.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Oh, Anstruther would do your work for you. You have been looking a little pale lately. I think that the change would do you good, and you are always so interested in Mr. Sherlock Holmes' cases.&quot;</td>
<td>«Or, Anstruther facus tua laboro por tu. Tu recente aspektis kelke pala. Me pensas, ka la chanjo bonfacos tu, e tu sempre interesas tu pri la kazi di Sherlock Holmes.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;I should be ungrateful if I were not, seeing what I gained through one of them,&quot; I answered. &quot;But if I am to go, I must pack at once, for I have only half an hour.&quot;</td>
<td>«Me altre esus desgratitudema, konsiderinte to quon me ganis pro un de li», me respondis. «Ma se me esas ironta, me mustas quik preparar mea valizo, nam me havas nur mi-horo.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>My experience of camp life in Afghanistan had at least had the effect of making me a prompt and ready traveller. My wants were few and simple, so that in less than the time stated I was in a cab with my valise, rattling away to Paddington Station. Sherlock Holmes was pacing up and down the platform, his tall, gaunt figure made even gaunter and taller by his long grey travelling-cloak and close-fitting cloth cap.</td>
<td>Mea experienci pri kampo-vivo en Afganistan adminime igis me esar quika e pronta voyajero. Me havis poka e simpla bezoni, tale ke, pos min kam ta tempo, me esis en fiaktro kun mea valizo, sukuseme vehante a Paddington-staciono. Sherlock Holmes pazis adavane ed ad-dope sur la staciono-embarkkeyo; ilua longa griza voyajo-mantelo e kasqueto igis ilua alta, magra figuro mem plu alta e magra.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;It is really very good of you to come, Watson,&quot; said he. &quot;It makes a considerable difference to me, having someone with me on whom I can thoroughly rely. Local aid is always either worthless or else biased. If you will keep the two corner seats I shall get the tickets.&quot;</td>
<td>«Esas grande afablajo, ke tu decidis venar, Watson», dicis il. «Por me lo efektigas granda differo, havar kun me ulu a qua me povas tote fidar. Lokala helpo sempre esas o senvalora o predispozita. Se tu retenos la du angulo-sideyi, me queros la bilieti.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>We had the carriage to ourselves save for an immense litter of papers which Holmes had brought with him. Among these he rummaged and read, with intervals of note-taking and of</td>
<td>Ni esis la sola okupanti di la vagono, ecepte imensa desordino de jurnali quin Holmes adportabis. Inter oli il trasarchis e lektis, tempope pauzante por notar e meditar, til ke</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
meditation, until we were past Reading. Then he suddenly rolled them all into a gigantic ball and tossed them up onto the rack.

"Have you heard anything of the case?" he asked.

"Not a word. I have not seen a paper for some days."

"The London press has not had very full accounts. I have just been looking through all the recent papers in order to master the particulars. It seems, from what I gather, to be one of those simple cases which are so extremely difficult."

"That sounds a little paradoxical."

"But it is profoundly true. Singularity is almost invariably a clue. The more featureless and commonplace a crime is, the more difficult it is to bring it home. In this case, however, they have established a very serious case against the son of the murdered man."

"It is a murder, then?"

"Well, it is conjectured to be so. I shall take nothing for granted until I have the opportunity of looking personally into it. I will explain the state of things to you, as far as I have been able to understand it, in a very few words."

"Boscombe Valley is a country district not very far from Ross, in Herefordshire. The largest landed proprietor in that part is a Mr. John Turner, who made his money in Australia and returned some years ago to the old country. One of the farms which he held, that of Hatherley, was let to Mr. Charles McCarthy, who was also an ex-Australian. The men had known each other in the colonies, so that it was not unnatural that when they came to settle down they should do so as near each other as possible. Turner was apparently the richer man, so McCarthy became his tenant but still remained, it seems, upon terms of perfect equality, as they were frequently together. McCarthy had one son, a lad of eighteen, and Turner had an only daughter of the same age, but neither of them had wives living. They appear to have avoided the society of the neighbouring English families and to have led retired lives, though both the McCarthys were fond of sport and were frequently seen at the race-meetings of the neighbourhood."
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>McCarthy kept two servants—a man and a girl. Turner had a considerable household, some half-dozen at the least. That is as much as I have been able to gather about the families. Now for the facts.</th>
<th>servisti – un homulo ed un yunino. Turner havis granda servistaro, adminime sis. Ti esis omno quon me povis deskovrar pri la familii. Nun, la fakti.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&quot;On June 3rd, that is, on Monday last, McCarthy left his house at Hatherley about three in the afternoon and walked down to the Boscombe Pool, which is a small lake formed by the spreading out of the stream which runs down the Boscombe Valley. He had been out with his serving-man in the morning at Ross, and he had told the man that he must hurry, as he had an appointment of importance to keep at three. From that appointment he never came back alive.</td>
<td>«Ye la 3-a junio – to esas, lasta lundio – McCarthy livis sua domo, ye proxime tri kloki posdimeze, e marchis a la lageto di Boscombe, qua esas formacita per la extenso di la rivereto qua fluas tra la valo Boscombe. Ta-matine il vizitabis Ross kun sua servistulo, ed il dicabis ad ilca ke il mustas hastar, nam il havas importanta rendevuo ye tri kloki posdimeze. De ta rendevuo il ne retrovenis vivante.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;From Hatherley Farm-house to the Boscombe Pool is a quarter of a mile, and two people saw him as he passed over this ground. One was an old woman, whose name is not mentioned, and the other was William Crowder, a game-keeper in the employ of Mr. Turner. Both these witnesses depose that Mr. McCarthy was walking alone. The game-keeper adds that within a few minutes of his seeing Mr. McCarthy pass he had seen his son, Mr. James McCarthy, going the same way with a gun under his arm. To the best of his belief, the father was actually in sight at the time, and the son was following him. He thought no more of the matter until he heard in the evening of the tragedy that had occurred.</td>
<td>«Esas quarima milio de farmeyo de farmeyo Haterley a la lageto di Boscombe, e du personi vidis il dum ke il tra-pasis ca tereno. Un de li esis olda muliero, di qua la nomo ne mencionesas, e la altra esis William Crowder, chasgardisto employata da Sro Turner. Amba testi atestas ke Sro McCarthy marchis sole. La chasgardisto dicas anke ke, nur kelka minuti pos ke il vidis Sro McCarthy, il vidis ilua filiulo, Sro James McCarthy, iranta sam-directione, portante pafilo sub sua brakio. Segun ilua kredo. la patro ankore esis videbla ye ta tempo e la filiulo sequis il. Il pensis nulo pluse to, til ke il vespere audis pri la tragedio qua eventabis.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The two McCarthys were seen after the time when William Crowder, the game-keeper, lost sight of them. The Boscombe Pool is thickly wooded round, with just a fringe of grass and of reeds round the edge. A girl of fourteen, Patience Moran, who is the daughter of the lodge-keeper of the Boscombe Valley estate, was in one of the woods picking flowers. She states that while she was there she saw, at the border of the wood and close by the lake, Mr. McCarthy and his son, and that they appeared to be having a violent quarrel. She heard Mr. McCarthy the elder using very strong language to his son, and she saw the latter raise up his hand as if to strike his father. She was so frightened by their violence that she ran away and told her mother when she reached home that she had left the two McCarthys quarrelling near Boscombe Pool, and that she was afraid</td>
<td>«Le du McCarthy videsis pos la tempo kande William Crowder, la chasgardisto, ne plu vidis li. La cirkumajo di valo Boscombe esas tre arbozoza, havante nur bordo de herbajo e kani. Yunino evanta dek-e-quar yari, Patience Moran, qua esas la filiino di la lojigardisto di la domeno di valo Boscombe, esis kolianta flori en un de la boski. El konstatas ke, dum ke el esis ibe, el vidis, ye la bordo di la bosko ed apud la lageto, Sro McCarthy ed ilua filiulo, e ke sembis ke li violento disputis. El audis Sro McCarthy maledikanta sua filiulo, ed el vidis ilca lavanta sua manuo quale po frapar sua patro. El tante pavorigesis da lia violento ke el fugis, ed el dicis a sua matro, kande el atingis sua hemo, ke el lasis le du McCarthy disputanta apud la lageto di Boscombe, e ke el timis ke li kombateskos. Quik pos ke el dicis ca vorti,</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
that they were going to fight. She had hardly said the words when young Mr. McCarthy came running up to the lodge to say that he had found his father dead in the wood, and to ask for the help of the lodge-keeper. He was much excited, without either his gun or his hat, and his right hand and sleeve were observed to be stained with fresh blood. On following him they found the dead body stretched out upon the grass beside the pool. The head had been beaten in by repeated blows of some heavy and blunt weapon. The injuries were such as might very well have been inflicted by the butt-end of his son's gun, which was found lying on the grass within a few paces of the body. Under these circumstances the young man was instantly arrested, and a verdict of 'wilful murder' having been returned at the inquest on Tuesday, he was on Wednesday brought before the magistrates at Ross, who have referred the case to the next Assizes. Those are the main facts of the case as they came out before the coroner and the police-court.

"I could hardly imagine a more damning case," I remarked. "If ever circumstantial evidence pointed to a criminal it does so here."

"Circumstantial evidence is a very tricky thing," answered Holmes thoughtfully. "It may seem to point very straight to one thing, but if you shift your own point of view a little, you may find it pointing in an equally uncompromising manner to something entirely different. It must be confessed, however, that the case looks exceedingly grave against the young man, and it is very possible that he is indeed the culprit. There are several people in the neighbourhood, however, and among them Miss Turner, the daughter of the neighbouring landowner, who believe in his innocence, and who have retained Lestrade, whom you may recollect in connection with the Study in Scarlet, to work out the case in his interest. Lestrade, being rather puzzled, has referred the case to me, and hence it is that two middle-aged gentlemen are flying westward at fifty miles an hour instead of quietly digesting their breakfasts at home."

"I am afraid," said I, "that the facts are so obvious that you will find little credit to be gained out of this case."

"Me apene povus imaginar plu damnanta kazo", me dicis. «Se cirkonstancal evidento ultempe indikis kriminanto, ol hare facas tale.»

«Cirkonstancal evidento esas tre necerta kazo», respondis Holmes reflekteme; «forsan semblas ke ol direte indikas kazo, ma se on movos su vid-ponto kelke, on forsan trovos ke ol indikas, egale ne-kompromisante, ulo tote diferanta. Tamen, on mustas agnoskar ke la kazo aspektas extreme grava por la yunulo, ed esas tre posibla ke il advere esas la kulpanto. Esas plura personi en la vicineso, tamen, inter li damzelo Turner, la filiino di la vicina terala proprietero, qui kredas ke il esas senkulpa, e qui retenis Lestrade, quan tu forsan memoras relate la Studio pri Skarlato, por solvar la kazo por il. Lestrade, esante kelke perplexigita, referis la kazo a me, e pro to du mez-evanta sioruli vehas vers la westo por rapideso di kinadek milii po horo, vice kalme digestar sua dejuneti heme.»

"Me timas", me dicis, «ke la fakti esas tante evidenta ke tu trovos poka honoro ganenda de ca kazo."
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>English</th>
<th>Cantonese</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&quot;There is nothing more deceptive than an obvious fact,&quot; he answered, laughing.</td>
<td>«Esas nulo plu deceptanta kam evidenta fakto», il respondis, ridante.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Besides, we may chance to hit upon some other obvious facts which may have been by no means obvious to Mr. Lestrade. You know me too well to think that I am boasting when I say that I shall either confirm or destroy his theory by means which he is quite incapable of employing, or even of understanding. To take the first example to hand, I very clearly perceive that in your bedroom the window is upon the right-hand side, and yet I question whether Mr. Lestrade would have noted even so self-evident a thing as that.&quot;</td>
<td>«Pluse, forsan eventos ke ni deskovros ula altra evidenta fakto qua posible esis nul-maniere evidenta por Sro Lestrade. Tu konocas me tro bone por kredas ke me fanfaronas, kande me dicas ke me o konfirmos o destruktos ilua teorio per moyeni quin il tote ne povas uzar, o mem komprenar. Prenante exemplo, me tre klare perceptas ke, en tua lito-chambro, la fenestro esas ye la dextra latero, e malgre to me questionas me ka Sro Lestrade remarkabuses ulo tante evedenta per su ipsa.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;How on earth--&quot;</td>
<td>«Ma – quale tu savis …?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;My dear fellow, I know you well. I know the military neatness which characterises you. You shave every morning, and in this season you shave by the sunlight; but since your shaving is less and less complete as we get farther back on the left side, until it becomes positively slovenly as we get round the angle of the jaw, it is surely very clear that that side is less illuminated than the other. I could not imagine a man of your habits looking at himself in an equal light and being satisfied with such a result. I only quote this as a trivial example of observation and inference. Therein lies my métier, and it is just possible that it may be of some service in the investigation which lies before us. There are one or two minor points which were brought out in the inquest, and which are worth considering.&quot;</td>
<td>«Mea kara amiko, me bone konocas tu. Me konocas la militala neteso qua karakterisas tu. Tu razas tu singla-matine, ed en ca sezono tu razas tu per sunlumo, ma pro ke tua razo divenas sempre min kompleta dum ke on plu dopeskas ye la sinistra latero, til ke ol divenas fakte neglijacha kande on cirkumeskas la angulo di la maxilo, estas certe tre klare ke ta latero esas min bone lumizata kam la altra. Me ne povus imaginar ke ulu havanta tua kustumi regardas su per uniforma lumo e satisfacesas da tala rezultajo. Me donas to nur kom triviala exemplo di observo ed infero. En to esas mea mestiero, ed esas posibla ke ol forsan esos utila por la venonta explorado. Esas un o du min granda punti quin on mencionis ye la mort-inquesto, e qui esas konsiderenda.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;What are they?&quot;</td>
<td>«Quo esas ti?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;It appears that his arrest did not take place at once, but after the return to Hatherley Farm. On the inspector of constabulary informing him that he was a prisoner, he remarked that he was not surprised to hear it, and that it was no more than his deserts. This observation of his had the natural effect of removing any traces of doubt which might have remained in the minds of the coroner's jury.&quot;</td>
<td>«Semblas ke ilua aresto ne eventis nemediate, ma nur pos la retroveno a farmeyo Hatherley. Lor ke la polic-inspektisto informis il ke il esas kapitito, il dicis ke il ne surprizesas da audiir to, e ke to esas nur quon il meritas. Ca observo naturale efektigis la formovo di irga mikra quanto di dubito qua posible restis en la mento di la jurio.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;It was a confession,&quot; I ejaculated.</td>
<td>«Ol esis konfeso», me klamis.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;No, for it was followed by a protestation of innocence.&quot;</td>
<td>«No, nam ol sequesis da aserto di ilua senkulpeso.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Coming on the top of such a damning series of events, it was at least a most suspicious circumstance.&quot;</td>
<td>«Pos tante damnanta serio di eventi, ol adminime esis tre suspektinda dico.»</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
"On the contrary," said Holmes, "it is the brightest rift which I can at present see in the clouds. However innocent he might be, he could not be such an absolute imbecile as not to see that the circumstances were very black against him. Had he appeared surprised at his own arrest, or feigned indignation at it, I should have looked upon it as highly suspicious, because such surprise or anger would not be natural under the circumstances, and yet might appear to be the best policy to a scheming man. His frank acceptance of the situation marks him as either an innocent man, or else as a man of considerable self-restraint and firmness. As to his remark about his own arrest, it was also not unnatural if you consider that he stood beside the dead body of his father, and that there is no doubt that he had that very day so far forgotten his filial duty as to bandy words with him, and even, according to the little girl whose evidence is so important, to raise his hand as if to strike him. The self-reproach and contrition which are displayed in his remark appear to me to be the signs of a healthy mind rather than of a guilty one."

I shook my head. "Many men have been hanged on far slighter evidence," I remarked.

"So they have. And many men have been wrongfully hanged." «To esas vera. E multa homi esas ne-yuste pendita.»

"What is the young man's own account of the matter?" «Quale esas la naraco di la yunulo ipsa pri la afero?»

"It is, I am afraid, not very encouraging to his supporters, though there are one or two points in it which are suggestive. You will find it here, and may read it for yourself." «Ol esas, me timas, ne tre kurajiganta por ilua helpanti, quankam esas un o du punti en ol qua esas sugestiva. Tu trovos ol hike, e tu povas lektar ol por tu ipsa.»

He picked out from his bundle a copy of the local Herefordshire paper, and having turned down the sheet he pointed out the paragraph in which the unfortunate young man had given his own statement of what had occurred. I settled myself down in the corner of the carriage and read it very carefully. It ran in this way:

"Mr. James McCarthy, the only son of the deceased, was then called and gave evidence as follows: 'I had been away from home for three days at Bristol, and had only just

---

"Kontree», dicis Holmes, «ol esas la maxim lumanta fendo quen me prezente povas vidar en la nubi. Irge quanta il esas senkulpo, il ne povis esar tante absoluta imbecilo, ke il ne povis vidar ke la cirkonstanci kontre il esas tre grava. Se il semblabus surprizata da sua aresto, o simulabus indigno pri ol, me konsiderabus lo kom tre suspektinda, pro ke tala surprizo od iraco ne esus naturala lor la cirkonstanci, e malgre to, lo forsam semblus la maxim bona ideo ad intrigemo. Ilua kandida acepto di la situeso montras il kom o senkulpa, o havanta granda su-rezervemos e fermeso. Pri ilua dico pri quon il meritis, to esas anke ne kontre-natura se on konsideresas ke il stacis an la kadavro di suo patro, ed esas nula dubito ke tel ta dio ipsa, il tante obliiviabis sua filiala devi, ke il disputis kun il, ed il mem, segun la yunino di qua la atesto esas tante importanta, levis sua manuo quale pro frapar il. La su-reprocho e kontrico qua montresas en ilua dico semblas a me esar la signi di mento sana, prefere kam kulpoza.»
My father was absent from home at the time of my arrival, and I was informed by the maid that he had driven over to Ross with John Cobb, the groom. Shortly after my return I heard the wheels of his trap in the yard, and, looking out of my window, I saw him get out and walk rapidly out of the yard, though I was not aware in which direction he was going. I then took my gun and strolled out in the direction of the Boscombe Pool, with the intention of visiting the rabbit warren which is upon the other side. On my way I saw William Crowder, the game-keeper, as he had stated in his evidence; but he is mistaken in thinking that I was following my father. I had no idea that he was in front of me. When about a hundred yards from the pool I heard a cry of "Cooee!" which was a usual signal between my father and myself. I then hurried forward, and found him standing by the pool. He appeared to be much surprised at seeing me and asked me rather roughly what I was doing there. A conversation ensued which led to high words and almost to blows, for my father was a man of a very violent temper. Seeing that his passion was becoming ungovernable, I left him and returned towards Hatherley Farm. I had not gone more than 150 yards, however, when I heard a hideous outcry behind me, which caused me to run back again. I found my father expiring upon the ground, with his head terribly injured. I dropped my gun and held him in my arms, but he almost instantly expired. I knelt beside him for some minutes, and then made my way to Mr. Turner's lodge-keeper, his house being the nearest, to ask for assistance. I saw no one near my father when I returned, and I have no idea how he came by his injuries. He was not a popular man, being somewhat cold and forbidding in his manners, but he had, as far as I know, no active enemies. I know nothing further of the matter.'

"The Coroner: Did your father make any statement to you before he died?"

"Witness: He mumbled a few words, but I could only catch some allusion to a rat."

"The Coroner: What did you understand by that?"

"Witness: It conveyed no meaning to me."

| My father was absent from home at the time of my arrival, and I was informed by the maid that he had driven over to Ross with John Cobb, the groom. Shortly after my return I heard the wheels of his trap in the yard, and, looking out of my window, I saw him get out and walk rapidly out of the yard, though I was not aware in which direction he was going. I then took my gun and strolled out in the direction of the Boscombe Pool, with the intention of visiting the rabbit warren which is upon the other side. On my way I saw William Crowder, the game-keeper, as he had stated in his evidence; but he is mistaken in thinking that I was following my father. I had no idea that he was in front of me. When about a hundred yards from the pool I heard a cry of "Cooee!" which was a usual signal between my father and myself. I then hurried forward, and found him standing by the pool. He appeared to be much surprised at seeing me and asked me rather roughly what I was doing there. A conversation ensued which led to high words and almost to blows, for my father was a man of a very violent temper. Seeing that his passion was becoming ungovernable, I left him and returned towards Hatherley Farm. I had not gone more than 150 yards, however, when I heard a hideous outcry behind me, which caused me to run back again. I found my father expiring upon the ground, with his head terribly injured. I dropped my gun and held him in my arms, but he almost instantly expired. I knelt beside him for some minutes, and then made my way to Mr. Turner's lodge-keeper, his house being the nearest, to ask for assistance. I saw no one near my father when I returned, and I have no idea how he came by his injuries. He was not a popular man, being somewhat cold and forbidding in his manners, but he had, as far as I know, no active enemies. I know nothing further of the matter.' | Mea patro esis ne-heme lor mea arivo, e me informesis da la servistino ke il vehis a Ross kun John Cobb, la grumo. Kurte pos mea retroveno, me audis la roti di ilua chareto en la korto, e, regardante ek mea fenestro, me vidis il ekirar e rapide marchar ek la korto, quankam me ne savis pri vers il iris. Me lore prenis mea pafilo, e flanis vers la lageto di Boscombe, intencante viziitar la kuniklogareno qua situesas ye la altra latero. Dum la pasajo me vidis William Crowder, la chasgardisto, quele il konstatis en sua atesto; ma il eroras, kredante ke me sequis mea patro. Me havis nula ideo, ke il esis avan me. Kande me esis proxime cent metri de la lageto, me audis krio Ku-i!» qua esis kustumala signo inter mea patro e me. Me lore hastis e trovis il stacanta aput la lageto. Il aspektis multe astonata vidar me, e questionis me kelke bruske pri quon me facis ibe. Interparoladi sequis, qua duktis ad iracoza vorti, e preske a bati, nam mea patro esis tre irocema homo. Vidante ke lua pasiono violentozesiks, me livis il, e retrovenis vers farmeyo Hatherley. Me irabis nur cent-e-kinadek metri, tamen, kande me audis hororinda krio dop me, qua igis me retrokurar. Me trovis mea patro mortanta sur la sulo, ilua kapo terorigive vundita. Me lasis mea pafilo flara, e tenis il en mea brakii, ma il preske ta-instante mortis. Me genu-pozis apud il dum plura minuti, e pose me iris a la lojio-gardisto di Sro Turner, di qua la domo esis la maxim proxima, por demandar helpo. Me vidis nulu apud me patro kande me retrovenis, e me havas nula ideo, pri quale is obtenis sua vunduri. Il ne esis populara persono: il havis manieri kelke kolda e severa: ma il havis, segun mea savo, nula aktiva enemiki. Me savas nulo pluse pri la afero.» | La Mort-inquestisto: «Ka vua patro facis irga aserto a vu ante ke il mortis?»

Testo: «Il murmuris kelka vorti, ma me povis nur audo aludo di rato.»

Inquestisto: «Quon vu komprenis pri to?»

Testo: «Lo signifikis nulo a me. Me kredis,
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Thought that he was delirious.</th>
<th>Ke il deliras.»</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The Coroner: What was the point upon which you and your father had this final quarrel?</td>
<td>Inquestisto: «Quo esis la punto pro qua vu e vua patro finale disputis?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Witness: I should prefer not to answer.</td>
<td>Testo: «Me preferus ne respondar.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The Coroner: I am afraid that I must press it.</td>
<td>Inquestisto: «Me timas ke me mustar persecurar lo.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Witness: It is really impossible for me to tell you. I can assure you that it has nothing to do with the sad tragedy which followed.</td>
<td>Testo: «Esas reale ne-possibla por me dicar lo a vu. Me povas certigar vu, ke lo tote ne koncernas la trista tragedio qua sequis.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The Coroner: That is for the court to decide. I need not point out to you that your refusal to answer will prejudice your case considerably in any future proceedings which may arise.</td>
<td>Inquestisto: «To esas decidenda da la korto. Ne esas neesa indikar a vu ke vua refuzo respondar grande detrimentos vua kazo en irga futura procedi qua forsas eventos.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Witness: I must still refuse.</td>
<td>Testo: «Tamen me mustas refuzar.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The Coroner: I understand that the cry of 'Cooee' was a common signal between you and your father?</td>
<td>Inquestisto: «Me komprenas, ke la krio (Ku-i) esis kustumala signo inter vu e vua patro?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Witness: It was.</td>
<td>Testo: «To esas vera.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The Coroner: How was it, then, that he uttered it before he saw you, and before he even knew that you had returned from Bristol?</td>
<td>Inquestisto: «Do, quale eventis, ke il kriis ol ante ke il vidis vu, ed ante ke il mem savis ke vu retrovenis de Bristol?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Witness (with considerable confusion): I do not know.</td>
<td>Testo (multe konfuzate): «Me ne savas.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;A Juryman: Did you see nothing which aroused your suspicions when you returned on hearing the cry and found your father fatally injured?</td>
<td>Juriano: «Ka vu vidis nulo qua igis vu suspektema, kande vu, audinte la krio, retrovenis e trovis vua patro mortigante vundita?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;The Coroner: What do you mean?</td>
<td>Inquestisto: «Quon vu intencas [volas dicar per to]?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Witness: I was so disturbed and excited as I rushed out into the open, that I could think of nothing except of my father. Yet I have a vague impression that as I ran forward something lay upon the ground to the left of me. It seemed to me to be something grey in colour, a coat of some sort, or a plaid perhaps. When I rose from my father I looked round for it, but it was gone.</td>
<td>Testo: «Me tante trublesis ed ecitesis lor ke me precipitoze kuris aden la sen-arboreyo, ke me povis pensar pri nulo ecepte mea patro. Tamen, me havas ne-definita impreso ke, lor ke me kuris adavane, ulo jacis sur la sulo ye sinistre. Semblis a me esar ulo griza de koloro, ulsorta vesto, o forsas mantelo. Kande me rilevis me de mea patro, me serchis cirkume por ol, ma ol esis desaparinta.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Do you mean that it disappeared before you went for help?&quot;</td>
<td>«Ka vu intencas [volas dicar per to] ke ol desaparis ante ke vu iris por helpo?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Yes, it was gone.'</td>
<td>«Yes, ol esis desparinta.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;You cannot say what it was?&quot;</td>
<td>«Vu ne povas dicar, quo ul esis?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;No, I had a feeling something was there.'</td>
<td>«No, me perceptis ke ulo esis ibe.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;How far from the body?&quot;</td>
<td>«Quante for la kadavro.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;A dozen yards or so.'</td>
<td>«Cirkume dek-e-du metri.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;And how far from the edge of the wood?&quot;</td>
<td>«E quante for la bordo di la bosko?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;About the same.'</td>
<td>«circume same.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Then if it was removed it was while you were within a dozen yards of it?&quot;</td>
<td>«Do, se ol formovesis, lo eventis dum ke vu esis min kam dek-e-du metri de ol?»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;Yes, but with my back towards it.'</td>
<td>«Yes, ma mea dorso esis vers ol.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;This concluded the examination of the witness.&quot;</td>
<td>To konkluzis la questionado di la testo.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>&quot;I see,&quot; said I as I glanced down the column, &quot;that the coroner in his concluding remarks was rather severe upon young McCarthy. He calls attention, and with reason, to the discrepancy about his father having signalled to him before seeing him, also to his refusal to give details of his conversation with his father, and his singular account of his father's dying words. They are all, as he remarks, very much against the son.&quot;</td>
<td>«Me vidas», me dicis, dum ke me regardis la kolumno, «ke la inquestisto, en sua konkluzanta diceji, traktis yuna McCarthy kelke severe. Il atencigas, kun kauzo, la deskonkordo pri ke ilua patro signalis ad il ante ke il vidis il, ed anke ilua refuzo detaligar sua konversado kun sua patro, ed ilua stranja deskriptio di la lasta vorti di sua patro. To esas omne, quale il dicas, tre multe kontre la filiulo.»</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Holmes laughed softly to himself and stretched himself out upon the cushioned seat. &quot;Both you and the coroner have been at some pains,&quot; said he, &quot;to single out the very strongest points in the young man's favour. Don't you see that you alternately give him credit for having too much imagination and too little? Too little, if he could not invent a cause of quarrel which would give him the sympathy of the jury; too much, if he evolved from his own inner consciousness anything so outré as a dying reference to a rat, and the incident of the vanishing cloth. No, sir, I shall approach this case from the point of view that what this young man says is true, and we shall see whither that hypothesis will lead us. And now here is my pocket Petrarch, and not another word shall I say of this case until we are on the scene of action. We lunch at Swindon, and I see that we shall be there in twenty minutes.&quot;</td>
<td>Holmes dolce ridis a su, ed extensis su en la kusenizita sideyo. «Tu e la inquestisto ambe penis», il dicis, «la maxim forta punti por layunulo. Ka tu ne vidas ke tu alterne kreditas il kom havanta tro multa imaginato e tro poka? Tro poka, se il ne povis inventar ula kauzo di dispute qua simpatigus il da la jurio; tro multa, se il developis, de sua propra interna koncio, irgo tam stranja kam mortanta aludo [aludo dil mortanto] di rato, e la incidento pri la desaparinta tuko. No, me advenos ca kazo de la vidpunto ke to quon cayunulo dicas esas vera, e nuvido ad-ube ta hipotezo duktos ni. En un, yen mea posholibro da Petrarch, e me dicos nula vorto pluse pri ca kazo til ke ni esos ye la cena. Ni repastos ye Swindon, e me dicas ke ni esos ibe en duadek minuti.»</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

It was nearly four o'clock when we at last, after passing through the beautiful Stroud Valley, and over the broad gleaming Severn, found ourselves at the pretty little country-

| En presque quar kloki kande ni fine, pos trapasinte la bela valo di Stroud, e super la large brilanta fluvio Severn, trovis ni ye la bela rurala urbeto Ross. Magra, furetatra |
In the town of Ross. A lean, ferret-like man, furtive and sly-looking, was waiting for us upon the platform. In spite of the light brown dustcoat and leather-leggings which he wore in deference to his rustic surroundings, I had no difficulty in recognising Lestrade, of Scotland Yard. With him we drove to the Hereford Arms where a room had already been engaged for us.

"I have ordered a carriage," said Lestrade as we sat over a cup of tea. "I knew your energetic nature, and that you would not be happy until you had been on the scene of the crime."

"It was very nice and complimentary of you," Holmes answered. "It is entirely a question of barometric pressure."

Lestrade looked startled. "I do not quite follow," he said.

"How is the glass? Twenty-nine, I see. No wind, and not a cloud in the sky. I have a caseful of cigarettes here which need smoking, and the sofa is very much superior to the usual country hotel abomination. I do not think that it is probable that I shall use the carriage to-night."

Lestrade laughed indulgently. "You have, no doubt, already formed your conclusions from the newspapers," he said. "The case is as plain as a pikestaff, and the more one goes into it the plainer it becomes. Still, of course, one can't refuse a lady, and such a very positive one, too. She has heard of you, and would have your opinion, though I repeatedly told her that there was nothing which you could do which I had not already done. Why, bless my soul! here is her carriage at the door."

"Oh, Mr. Sherlock Holmes!" she cried, glancing from one to the other of us, and finally, with a woman's quick intuition, fastening upon my companion, "I am so glad that you have come. I have driven down to tell..."
you so. I know that James didn't do it. I know it, and I want you to start upon your work knowing it, too. Never let yourself doubt upon that point. We have known each other since we were little children, and I know his faults as no one else does; but he is too tender-hearted to hurt a fly. Such a charge is absurd to anyone who really knows him.

"I hope we may clear him, Miss Turner," said Sherlock Holmes. "You may rely upon my doing all that I can."

"But you have read the evidence. You have formed some conclusion? Do you not see some loophole, some flaw? Do you not yourself think that he is innocent?"

"I think that it is very probable."  "In what way?" asked Holmes.  "And your father?" asked Holmes. "Was he in favour of such a union?"

"No, he was averse to it also. No one but Mr. McCarthy was in favour of it." A quick blush passed over her fresh young face as Holmes shot one of his keen, questioning glances at her.

"But he is right. Oh! I know that he is right. James never did it. And about his quarrel with his father, I am sure that the reason why he would not speak about it to the coroner was because I was concerned in it."

"There, now!" she cried, throwing back her head and looking defiantly at Lestrade. "You hear! He gives me hopes."

"But you have read the evidence. You have formed some conclusion? Do you not see some loophole, some flaw? Do you not yourself think that he is innocent?"

"There, now!" el klamis, dopjetante sua kapo e regardante Lestrade defiento [defiante, defieme]. «Vu audas! Il donas espero a me.»

"In what way?" questionis Holmes. «Quala-maniere?» questionis Holmes.

"No, he was averse to it also. No one but Mr. McCarthy was in favour of it." A quick blush passed over her fresh young face as Holmes shot one of his keen, questioning glances at her.

"But he is right. Oh! I know that he is right. James never did it. And about his quarrel with his father, I am sure that the reason why he would not speak about it to the coroner was because I was concerned in it."
"Thank you for this information," said he. "May I see your father if I call to-morrow?"

"I am afraid the doctor won't allow it."

"The doctor?"

"Yes, have you not heard? Poor father has never been strong for years back, but this has broken him down completely. He has taken to his bed, and Dr. Willows says that he is a wreck and that his nervous system is shattered. Mr. McCarthy was the only man alive who had known dad in the old days in Victoria."

"Ha! In Victoria! That is important."

"Yes, at the mines."

"Quite so; at the gold-mines, where, as I understand, Mr. Turner made his money."

"Yes, certainly."

"Thank you, Miss Turner. You have been of material assistance to me."

"You will tell me if you have any news to-morrow. No doubt you will go to the prison to see James. Oh, if you do, Mr. Holmes, do tell him that I know him to be innocent."

"I will, Miss Turner."

"I must go home now, for dad is very ill, and he misses me so if I leave him. Good-bye, and God help you in your undertaking." She hurried from the room as impulsively as she had entered, and we heard the wheels of her carriage rattle off down the street.

"I am ashamed of you, Holmes," said Lestrade with dignity after a few minutes' silence. "Why should you raise up hopes which you are bound to disappoint? I am not over-tender of heart, but I call it cruel."

"I think that I see my way to clearing James McCarthy," said Holmes. "Have you an order to see him in prison?"

"Yes, but only for you and me."

"Then I shall reconsider my resolution about going out. We have still time to take a train to Hereford and see him to-night?"
"Ample."

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>&quot;Then let us do so, Watson, I fear that you will find it very slow, but I shall only be away a couple of hours.&quot;</th>
<th>«Do, ni agez tale. Watson, me timas ke esos tre tedanta, ma me esos absenta nur dum paro de [poka] hori.»</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

I walked down to the station with them, and then wandered through the streets of the little town, finally returning to the hotel, where I lay upon the sofa and tried to interest myself in a yellow-backed novel. The puny plot of the story was so thin, however, when compared to the deep mystery through which we were groping, and I found my attention wander so continually from the action to the fact, that I at last flung it across the room and gave myself up entirely to a consideration of the events of the day. Supposing that this unhappy young man's story were absolutely true, then what hellish thing, what absolutely unforeseen and extraordinary calamity could have occurred between the time when he parted from his father, and the moment when, drawn back by his screams, he rushed into the glade? It was something terrible and deadly. What could it be? Might not the nature of the injuries reveal something to my medical instincts? I rang the bell and called for the weekly county paper, which contained a verbatim account of the inquest. In the surgeon's deposition it was stated that the posterior third of the left parietal bone and the left half of the occipital bone had been shattered by a heavy blow from a blunt weapon. I marked the spot upon my own head. Clearly such a blow must have been struck from behind.

That was to some extent in favour of the accused, as when seen quarrelling he was face to face with his father. Still, it did not go for very much, for the older man might have turned his back before the blow fell. Still, it might be worth while to call Holmes' attention to it. Then there was the peculiar dying reference to a rat. What could that mean? It could not be delirium. A man dying from a sudden blow does not commonly become delirious. No, it was more likely to be an attempt to explain how he met his fate. But what could it indicate? I cudgelled my brains to find some possible explanation. And then the incident of the grey cloth seen by young McCarthy. If that were true the murderer must have dropped some part of his dress, presumably his overcoat, in his flight, and must have had the hardihood to return and to carry it away at the instant when the son was kneeling with his back turned not a dozen paces off. What a tissue of mysteries and improbabilities the whole thing was! I did not wonder at Lestrade's opinion, and yet I had so much faith in Sherlock Holmes' insight that I could not lose hope as long as every fresh fact seemed to strengthen his conviction of young McCarthy's innocence.

Ulgrade, to favoris la akuzato, nam kande on vidis il disputanta, il esis vizajo kontre vizajo kun sua patro. Tamen, lo ne signifikis multe, nam la plu olda homulo forsas deturnis ante ke la bato venis. Ma forsas lo meritus la atenco di Holmes. Anke, esis la stranja mortanta aludo [aludo dil mortanto] di rato. Quon to povis signifikar? Lo ne povis esir deliro. Persono mortanta pro subita bato kustumale ne delireskas. No, esis plu probabl la ke lo esis esforco explikar pri quale il renkontris sua fato. Ma quon to povis indikar? Me par-exploris mea mento por trovar ula posibla expliko. E la incidento pri la griza tujo, vidita da yuna McCarthy. Se to esis vera, la ocidinto mustis, lor sua fugo, faligir ula vesto, supozeble sua mantelo, ed il mustis havir la audaco por retro-irir e for-

It was late before Sherlock Holmes returned. He came back alone, for Lestrade was staying in lodgings in the town.

"The glass still keeps very high," he remarked as he sat down. "It is of importance that it should not rain before we are able to go over the ground. On the other hand, a man should be at his very best and keenest for such nice work as that, and I did not wish to do it when fagged by a long journey. I have seen young McCarthy."

"And what did you learn from him?"

"Nothing."

"Could he throw no light?"

"None at all. I was inclined to think at one time that he knew who had done it and was screening him or her, but I am convinced now that he is as puzzled as everyone else. He is not a very quick-witted youth, though comely to look at and, I should think, sound at heart."

"I cannot admire his taste," I remarked, "if it is indeed a fact that he was averse to a marriage with so charming a young lady as this Miss Turner."

"Ah, thereby hangs a rather painful tale. This fellow is madly, insanely, in love with her, but some two years ago, when he was only a lad, and before he really knew her, for she had been away five years at a boarding-school, what does the idiot do but get into the clutches of a barmaid in Bristol and marry her at a registry office? No one knows a word of the matter, but you can imagine how maddening it must be to him to be upbraided for not doing what he would give his very eyes to do, but what he knows to be absolutely impossible. It was sheer frenzy of this sort which made him throw his hands up into the air when his father, at their last interview, was goading him on to propose to Miss Turner. On the other hand, he had no means of supporting himself, and his father, who was by all accounts a very hard man, would have thrown him over utterly had he known the truth. It was with his barmaid wife that he had spent the last three days in Bristol, and his father did not know where he was. Mark that point. It is of importance. Good has come out of evil, however, for the barmaid, finding from the papers that he is in serious trouble and likely to be hanged, has thrown him over utterly and has written to him to say that she has a husband already in the Bermuda Dockyard, so that there is really no tie between them. I think that that bit of news has consoled young McCarthy for all that he has suffered."

"But if he is innocent, who has done it?"

"Ah! who? I would call your attention very particularly to two points. One is that the murdered man had an appointment with someone at the pool, and that the someone could not have been his son, for his son was away, and he did not know when he would return. The second is that the murdered man was heard to cry 'Cooee!' before he knew that his son had returned. Those are the crucial points upon which the case depends.

And now let us talk about George Meredith, if you please, and we shall leave all minor matters until to-morrow."

There was no rain, as Holmes had foretold, and the morning broke bright and cloudless. At nine o'clock Lestrade called for us with the carriage, and we set off for Hatherley Farm and the Boscombe Pool.

"There is serious news this morning," Lestrade observed. "It is said that Mr. Turner, of the Hall, is so ill that his life is despaired of."

"An elderly man, I presume?" said Holmes.

"About sixty; but his constitution has been shattered by his life abroad, and he has been in failing health for some time. This business has had a very bad effect upon him. He was an old friend of McCarthy's, and, I may add, a great benefactor to him, for I have learned that he gave him Hatherley Farm rent free."
"Indeed! That is interesting," said Holmes.
«Advere! To esas interesanta», dicis

"Oh, yes! In a hundred other ways he has helped him. Everybody about here speaks of his kindness to him."
«Ho, yes! Per cent altra moyeni il helpis il. Omnu hike parolas pri ilua bonvolala agi ad il.»

"Really! Does it not strike you as a little singular that this McCarthy, who appears to have had little of his own, and to have been under such obligations to Turner, should still talk of marrying his son to Turner's daughter, who is, presumably, heiress to the estate, and that in such a very cocksure manner, as if it were merely a case of a proposal and all else would follow? It is the more strange, since we know that Turner himself was averse to the idea. The daughter told us as much. Do you not deduce something from that?"
«Fakte! Ke ne semblas a vu esar kelke singulara ke ca McCarthy, qua semblante posedis ne-multo, e tante obligesis a Turner, tamen parolas pri mariarja sua filiulo kun la filiino di Turner, qua, supozeble, heredos la havajo, e parolas pri to quale lo esis absolute certa, quale on nur propozus ed omno ne-eviteble sequus? Esas plu stranja pro ke ni savas ke Turner ipsa desinklinis a la ideo. La filiino dicis tale a ni. Ka vu ne deduktas ulo de to?»

"We have got to the deductions and the inferences," said Lestrade, winking at me. "I find it hard enough to tackle facts, Holmes, without flying away after theories and fancies."
«Ni atingis la dedukti e la inferi», dicis Lestrade, signifikante per la okulo a me. «Semblas a me esar sat desfacila traktar la fakti, Holmes, sen anke persequir teorii e fantazii.»

"You are right," said Holmes demurely; "you do find it very hard to tackle the facts."
«Vu esas justa», dicis Holmes moderate; «ya semblas a vu esar tre desfacila traktar la fakti.»

"Anyhow, I have grasped one fact which you seem to find it difficult to get hold of," replied Lestrade with some warmth.
«Irgaquale, me komprenas ula fakto quan vu semblante ne povas facile komprenar», respondis Lestrade kelke varme.

"And that is--"
«E to esas?»

"That McCarthy senior met his death from McCarthy junior and that all theories to the contrary are the merest moonshine."
«Ke McCarthy, patro, renkontris sua morto pro McCarthy, filiulo, e ke omna kontrea teorii esas tam ne-reala kam lunlumo.»

"Well, moonshine is a brighter thing than fog," said Holmes, laughing. "But I am very much mistaken if this is not Hatherley Farm upon the left."
«Or. lunlumo esas plu brilanta kam nebulo», dicis Holmes, ridante. «Ma me tre eroras, se ne esas farmeyo Hatherley ye sinistre»

"Yes, that is it." It was a widespread, comfortable-looking building, two-storied, slate-roofed, with great yellow blotches of lichen upon the grey walls. The drawn blinds and the smokeless chimneys, however, gave it a stricken look, as though the weight of this horror still lay heavy upon it. We called at the door, when the maid, at Holmes' request, showed us the boots which her master wore at the time of his death, and also a pair of the son's, though not the pair which he had then had. Having measured these very carefully from seven or eight different points, Holmesivaraj la griza muri. La tirita stori e la senfuma kameni igis ol aspektar sufrinta, quale [quale se] la graveso di ta hororo ankore jacis pezoze sur ol. Ni venis a la pordo, e la servistino, segun la demando di Holmes, montris a ni la boti quin sua mastrulo *weris lor ilua morto, ed anke la boti di la filiulo, quankam ne la paro quan il lore *weris. Mezurinte olca tre sorgoze de sep od ok diferanta punti, Holmes deziris ke on duktez desired to be led to the court-yard, from which we all followed the winding track which led to Boscombe Pool.

Sherlock Holmes was transformed when he was hot upon such a scent as this. Men who had only known the quiet thinker and logician of Baker Street would have failed to recognise him. His face flushed and darkened. His brows were drawn into two hard black lines, while his eyes shone out from beneath them with a steely glitter. His face was bent downward, his shoulders bowed, his lips compressed, and the veins stood out like whipcord in his long, sinewy neck. His nostrils seemed to dilate with a purely animal lust for the chase, and his mind was so absolutely concentrated upon the matter before him that a question or remark fell unheeded upon his ears, or, at the most, only provoked a quick, impatient snarl in reply. Swiftly and silently he made his way along the track which ran through the meadows, and so by way of the woods to the Boscombe Pool. It was damp, marshy ground, as is all that district, and there were marks of many feet, both upon the path and amid the short grass which bounded it on either side. Sometimes Holmes would hurry on, sometimes stop dead, and once he made quite a little detour into the meadow. Lestrade and I walked behind him, the detective indifferent and contemptuous, while I watched my friend with the interest which sprang from the conviction that every one of his actions was directed towards a definite end.

The Boscombe Pool, which is a little reed-girt sheet of water some fifty yards across, is situated at the boundary between the Hatherley Farm and the private park of the wealthy Mr. Turner. Above the woods which lined it upon the farther side we could see the red, jutting pinnacles which marked the site of the rich landowner's dwelling. On the Hatherley side of the pool the woods grew very thick, and there was a narrow belt of sodden grass twenty paces across between the edge of the trees and the reeds which lined the lake. Lestrade showed us the exact spot at which the body had been found, and, indeed, so moist was the ground, that I could plainly see the traces which had been left by the fall of the stricken man. To Holmes, as I could see by his eager face and peering eyes, very many other things were to be read upon the trampled grass. He ran round, like a dog who is picking up a scent, and then turned upon my companion.

La lageto di Boscombe, qua esas mikra kano-cirkondata exenso de aquo larja de kinadek metri, situesas ye la limito inter farmeyo Hatherley e la privata parko di la richa Sro Turner. Super la bosko qua bordizis ol ye la plu fora latero, ni povis vidar la reda salianta pinakli qua [qui] indikis la situeso di la rezideyo di la richa terala proprietero. Ye la latero di la lageto vers Hatherley, la bosko divenis tre densa, ed esis streta zono di trempata herba, larja de duadek pazi, inter la bordo di la arbori e la kani qua bordizis loko ube on trovabis la mortinto, ed advere, tante trempata esis la sulu ke me povis klare vidar la traci qua restis de la falo di la vundito. Segun Holmes, quale me povis vidar per ilua avida vizajo ed atencoza okuli, tre multa altra kozi esis lektenda en la tramplita herba. Il cirkumiris, quale hundo

"What did you go into the pool for?" he asked. «Pro quo vi iris aden la lageto?» il questionis.

"I fished about with a rake. I thought there might be some weapon or other trace. But how on earth--" «Me serchis cirkume per rastilo. Me pensis ke esas posible ula armo, od ula altra traco. Ma quale vu savis …?»

"Oh, tut, tut! I have no time! That left foot of yours with its inward twist is all over the place. A mole could trace it, and there it vanishes among the reeds. Oh, how simple it would all have been had I been here before they came like a herd of buffalo and wallowed all over it. Here is where the party with the lodge-keeper came, and they have covered all tracks for six or eight feet round the body. But here are three separate tracks of the same feet." He drew out a lens and lay down upon his waterproof to have a better view, talking all the time rather to himself than to us. "These are young McCarthy's feet. Twice he was walking, and once he ran swiftly, so that the soles are deeply marked and the heels hardly visible. That bears out his story. He ran when he saw his father on the ground. Then here are the father's feet as he paced up and down. What is this, then? It is the butt-end of the gun as the son stood listening. And this? Ha, ha! What have we here? Tiptoes! tiptoes! Square, too, quite unusual boots! They come, they go, they come again--of course that was for the cloak. Now where did they come from?"

He ran up and down, sometimes losing, sometimes finding the track until we were well within the edge of the wood and under the shadow of a great beech, the largest tree in the neighbourhood. Holmes traced his way to the farther side of this and lay down once more upon his face with a little cry of satisfaction. For a long time he remained there, turning over the leaves and dried sticks, gathering up what seemed to me to be dust into an envelope and examining with his lens not only the ground but even the bark of the tree as far as he could reach. A jagged stone was lying among the moss, and this also he carefully examined and retained. Then he followed a pathway through the wood until he came to the highroad, where all traces were lost.

"It has been a case of considerable interest," he remarked, returning to his natural manner. "I Fancy that this grey house on the right must be the lodge. I think that I will go in and have a word with Moran, and perhaps write a little note. Having done that, we may drive back to our luncheon. You may walk to the cab, and I shall be with you presently."

It was about ten minutes before we regained our cab and drove back into Ross, Holmes still carrying with him the stone which he had picked up in the wood.

"This may interest you, Lestrade," he remarked, holding it out. "The murder was done with it."

"I see no marks."

"There are none."

"How do you know, then?"

"The grass was growing under it. It had only lain there a few days. There was no sign of a place whence it had been taken. It corresponds with the injuries. There is no sign of any other weapon."

"And the murderer?"

"Is a tall man, left-handed, limps with the right leg, wears thick-soled shooting-boots and a grey cloak, smokes Indian cigars, uses a cigar-holder, and carries a blunt pen-knife in his pocket. There are several other indications, but these may be enough to aid us in our search."

Lestrade laughed. "I am afraid that I am still a sceptic," he said. "Theories are all very well, but we have to deal with a hard-headed British jury."

"Nous verrons," answered Holmes calmly. "You work your own method, and I shall work mine. I shall be busy this afternoon, and shall probably return to London by the evening train."

"And leave your case unfinished?"

"No, finished."

"But the mystery?"

"It is solved."

"Who was the criminal, then?"
| "The gentleman I describe." | «La siorulo quan me deskriptas.» |
| "But who is he?" | «Ma qua esas il?» |
| "Surely it would not be difficult to find out. This is not such a populous neighbourhood." | «Sendubite, ne esus desfacila deskovrar. Ol ne esas tante populoza vicineso [vicinajo].» |
| Lestrade shrugged his shoulders. "I am a practical man," he said, "and I really cannot undertake to go about the country looking for a left-handed gentleman with a game leg. I should become the laughing-stock of Scotland Yard." | Lestrade levis la shultri. «Me esas praktikemo», il dicis, «me reale ne povas asumar, irar cirkume en la regiono, serchante sinistruzzanto havanta klaudikema gambo. Me divenus la mokajo di Scatland Yard» |
| "All right," said Holmes quietly. "I have given you the chance. Here are your lodgings. Goodbye. I shall drop you a line before I leave." | «Bone», dicis Holmes kalme. «Me donis a vu la opportunajo. Yen vua lojeyo. Til rivo. Me sendos letreto a vu ante ke me departos.» |
| Having left Lestrade at his rooms, we drove to our hotel, where we found lunch upon the table. Holmes was silent and buried in thought with a pained expression upon his face, as one who finds himself in a perplexing position. | Lestrade decensinte ye sua lojeyo [livinte Lestrade ye ilua lojeyo], ni vehis a nia hotelo, ube ni trovis nia repasto sur la tablo. Holmes esis tacanta e pensema, havanta doloroza aspekto ye la vizajo, quale ulu qua trovas su en perplexiganta situeso. |
| "Look here, Watson," he said when the cloth was cleared "just sit down in this chair and let me preach to you for a little. I don't know quite what to do, and I should value your advice. Light a cigar and let me expound." | «Nu, Watson,» il dicis, kande la tablo-utensili esis forprenita, «voluntez sideskar en ta stulo e lasez me kelke predikar a tu. Me ne tote savas quon me devas facar, e me prizus tua konsilo. Acendez sigaro, e lasez me explikar.» |
| "Pray do so." | «Me pregas, facez lo.» |
| "Well, now, in considering this case there are two points about young McCarthy's narrative which struck us both instantly, although they impressed me in his favour and you against him. One was the fact that his father should, according to his account, cry 'Cooee!' before seeing him. The other was his singular dying reference to a rat. He mumbled several words, you understand, but that was all that caught the son's ear. Now from this double point our research must commence, and we will begin it by presuming that what the lad says is absolutely true." | «Nu, konsiderante ca kazo, esas du punti pri la naraco di yuna McCarthy qui quik semblis, a ni amba, esar remarkinda, quankam oli impresis me kom favoranta i, e tu kom kontre il. Un de li esis la fakto ke ilua patro, segun ilua naraco, klamis ‹ku-i!› ante ke il vidis il. La altra esis ilua stranja mortanta aludo [stranja aludo, mortante,] di rato. Il murmurus plura vorti, tu komprenas, ma to esis omno quon la filiulo povis askoltar. Nu, de ca duoplo punto nia serchado mustas komencar, e ni inicios ol supozante ke to quon la yunulo dicas esas absolute vera.» |
| "What of this 'Cooee!' then?" | «Or, quale pri la ‹ku-i!› ta-kaze?» |
| "Well, obviously it could not have been meant for the son. The son, as far as he knew, was in Bristol. It was mere chance that he was within earshot. The 'Cooee!' was meant to attract the attention of whoever it was that he had the appointment with. But 'Cooee' is a distinctly | «Evidente, ol ne esis destinata a la filiulo. La filiulo, segun quante il savis, esis en Bristol. Esis nur hazarde ke il audis ol. La patro intencis ke la ‹ku-i!› esez atencata da ulu kun qua il havis rendevuo. Ma ‹ku-i!› esas partikulare Australiana klamo, uzata inter |
Australian cry, and one which is used between Australians. There is a strong presumption that the person whom McCarthy expected to meet him at Boscombe Pool was someone who had been in Australia."

"What of the rat, then?"

Sherlock Holmes took a folded paper from his pocket and flattened it out on the table. "This is a map of the Colony of Victoria," he said. "I wired to Bristol for it last night." He put his hand over part of the map. "What do you read?"

"ARAT," I read.

"And now?" He raised his hand.

"BALLARAT."

"Quite so. That was the word the man uttered, and of which his son only caught the last two syllables. He was trying to utter the name of his murderer. So and so, of Ballarat."

"It is wonderful!" I exclaimed.

"It is obvious. And now, you see, I had narrowed the field down considerably. The possession of a grey garment was a third point which, granting the son's statement to be correct, was a certainty. We have come now out of mere vagueness to the definite conception of an Australian from Ballarat with a grey cloak."

"Certainly."

"And one who was at home in the district, for the pool can only be approached by the farm or by the estate, where strangers could hardly wander."

"Quite so."

"Then comes our expedition of to-day. By an examination of the ground I gained the trifling details which I gave to that imbecile Lestrade, as to the personality of the criminal."

"But how did you gain them?"

"You know my method. It is founded upon the observation of trifles."

"His height I know that you might roughly judge from the length of his stride. His boots, too, might be told from their traces."
| "Yes, they were peculiar boots." | «Yes, oli esis partikulara boti.» |
| "But his lameness?" | «Ma lua klaudikado?» |
| "The impression of his right foot was always less distinct than his left. He put less weight upon it. Why? Because he limped--he was lame." | «La impresuro di lua dextra boto sempre esis min klara kam lua sinistra. Lu pozis minmulta pezo sur ol. Pro quo? Pro ke lu klaudikis.» |
| "But his left-handedness." | «Ma lua sinistrazanteso?» |
| "You were yourself struck by the nature of the injury as recorded by the surgeon at the inquest. The blow was struck from immediately behind, and yet was upon the left side. Now, how can that be unless it were by a left-handed man? He had stood behind that tree during the interview between the father and son. He had even smoked there. I found the ash of a cigar, which my special knowledge of tobacco ashes enables me to pronounce as an Indian cigar. I have, as you know, devoted some attention to this, and written a little monograph on the ashes of 140 different varieties of pipe, cigar, and cigarette tobacco. Having found the ash, I then looked round and discovered the stump among the moss where he had tossed it. It was an Indian cigar, of the variety which are rolled in Rotterdam." | «Semblis a tu ipsa ke la naturo di la vunduro, quale la kirurgiisto registragis ye la inquesto, esis remarkinda. La bato venis nemediate de dope, e malgre to ol esis ye la sinistra latero. Or, quale to eventis se ne facita da sinistrazanto? Il stacabis dop ta arboro dum la konverso inter la patro e la filiulo. Il mem fumis ibe. Me trovis la cindri di tabako kapabligis me deklarar ke ol esis Indiana sigaro. Quale tu savas, me ja devotigis ula atenco a ta temo, e skribis mikra monografio pri la cindri di 140 diferanta sorti di la tabako di pipi, sigari e sigareti. Trovinte la cindri, me pose serchis cirkume e deskovris la stumpo meze di la musko, ad-ube il jetabis ol. Ol esis Indiana sigaro, de la sorto qua fabrikasas en Rotterdam.» |
| "And the cigar-holder?" | «E la sigariero?» |
| "I could see that the end had not been in his mouth. Therefore he used a holder. The tip had been cut off, not bitten off, but the cut was not a clean one, so I deduced a blunt pen-knife." | «Me povis vidar ke la extremajo ne esabis en ilua boko. Do, il uzis sigariero. La pinto esis detranchita, ne demordita, ma la trancho ne esis neta, do me deduktis senpinta [ne-akuta] posh-kulteleto.» |
| "Holmes," I said, "you have drawn a net round this man from which he cannot escape, and you have saved an innocent human life as truly as if you had cut the cord which was hanging him. I see the direction in which all this points. The culprit is--" | «Holmes», me dicis, «tu tiras reto cirkum ta homulo, de qua il ne povas eskapar, e tu salvas senkulpa homala vivo tante certe quale se tu ipsa tranchas la kordo qua pendas il. La kulpanto esas --» |
| "Mr. John Turner," cried the hotel waiter, opening the door of our sitting-room, and ushering in a visitor. | «Sioro John Turner», klamis la hotel-servistulo, apertante la pordo di nia flaneyo, ed enduktante vizitanto. |
| The man who entered was a strange and impressive figure. His slow, limping step and bowed shoulders gave the appearance of decrepitude, and yet his hard, deep-lined, craggy features, and his enormous limbs | La homulo qua eniris esis stranaj ed impresoza figuro. Ilua lenta, klaudikanta pazo es inklinita shultri sembigis esar febla, e tamen ilua harda, forte-lineizita vizajo, ed ilua enorma membri montris ke il posedis | showed that he was possessed of unusual strength of body and of character. His tangled beard, grizzled hair, and outstanding, drooping eyebrows combined to give an air of dignity and power to his appearance, but his face was of an ashen white, while his lips and the corners of his nostrils were tinged with a shade of blue. It was clear to me at a glance that he was in the grip of some deadly and chronic disease.

"Pray sit down on the sofa," said Holmes gently. "You had my note?"

"Yes, the lodge-keeper brought it up. You said that you wished to see me here to avoid scandal."

"I thought people would talk if I went to the Hall."

"And why did you wish to see me?" He looked across at my companion with despair in his weary eyes, as though his question was already answered.

"Yes," said Holmes, answering the look rather than the words. "It is so. I know all about McCarthy."

The old man sank his face in his hands. "God help me!" he cried. "But I would not have let the young man come to harm. I give you my word that I would have spoken out if it went against him at the Assizes."

"I am glad to hear you say so," said Holmes gravely.

"I would have spoken now had it not been for my dear girl. It would break her heart--it will break her heart when she hears that I am arrested."

"It may not come to that," said Holmes.

"What?"

"I am no official agent. I understand that it was your daughter who required my presence here, and I am acting in her interests. Young McCarthy must be got off, however."

"I am a dying man," said old Turner. "I have had diabetes for years. My doctor says it is a question whether I shall live a month. Yet I would rather die under my own roof than in a neordinara forteso en sua korpo e karaktero. Ilua desordinata barbo ed hararo, e salienta, pendentanta brovi ensemble prisentis aspekto di respektindeso e povo, ma ilua vizajo esis mortatre blanka, ed ilua labii e la anguli di ilua naztrui havis blua tinteso. Esis quik klara a me ke il tenegesis da ula mortiva e kronika morbo.

---

"Me pregas, sideskez sur la sofafo», dicis Holmes dolce. «Vu recevis mea letreto?»

"Yes, la lojio-gardisto adportis ol. Vu skribis ke vu deziiris rendevuar hike kun me, por evitare skandalo.»

«Me pensis ke la populo babilus, se me venus a la domeno-domo.»

"E pro quo vu deziras rendevuar kun me?" Il transe regardis mea kompano, desespero en sua fatigita okuli, quale on ja respondabis ad ilua questiono.

"Yes», dicis Holmes, respondante a la regardo, prefere kam a la vorti. «Esas tale. Me savas omno pri McCarthy»

La oldulo sinkis la vizajo aden la manui. «Deo helpez me!» il klamis. «Mam ne lasabus la yunulo esar ruinita. Me donas a vu mea honor-promiso ke me laute parolabus se la kazo divenabus desbona por il ye la tribunalo.»

«Me joyas, ke me audas ke vu dicas tale», dicis Holmes grave.

«Me ja parolabus, ecepte pro mea kara filiino. Lo ruptus elua kordio – lo ruptos elua kordia kande el audos ke me arestesas.»

«Forsan to ne eventos», dicis Holmes.

«Quo!»

«Me esas nula oficala agento. Me komprenas ke esas vua filiino, qua bezonas mea asisto hike, e me agas por el. Yuna McCarthy, tamen, mustas liberigesar.»

«Me esas mortanto», dicis olda Turner. «Me havas diabeto de multa yari. Mea mediko dicas ke esas dubito pri ka me vivos dum monato. Tamen, me preferus mortar sub mea
Holmes rose and sat down at the table with his pen in his hand and a bundle of paper before him. "Just tell us the truth," he said. "I shall jot down the facts. You will sign it, and Watson here can witness it. Then I could produce your confession at the last extremity to save young McCarthy. I promise you that I shall not use it unless it is absolutely needed."

"It's as well," said the old man; "it's a question whether I shall live to the Assizes, so it matters little to me, but I should wish to spare Alice the shock. And now I will make the thing clear to you; it has been a long time in the acting, but will not take me long to tell.

"You didn't know this dead man, McCarthy. He was a devil incarnate. I tell you that. God keep you out of the clutches of such a man as he. His grip has been upon me these twenty years, and he has blasted my life. I'll tell you first how I came to be in his power.

"It was in the early '60's at the diggings. I was a young chap then, hot-blooded and reckless, ready to turn my hand at anything; I got among bad companions, took to drink, had no luck with my claim, took to the bush, and in a word became what you would call over here a highway robber. There were six of us, and we had a wild, free life of it, sticking up a station from time to time, or stopping the wagons on the road to the diggings. Black Jack of Ballarat was the name I went under, and our party is still remembered in the colony as the Ballarat Gang.

"One day a gold convoy came down from Ballarat to Melbourne, and we lay in wait for it and attacked it. There were six troopers and six of us, so it was a close thing, but we emptied four of their saddles at the first volley. Three of our boys were killed, however, before we got the swag. I put my pistol to the head of the wagon-driver, who was this very man McCarthy. I wish to the Lord that I had shot him then, but I spared him, though I saw his wicked little eyes fixed on my face, as though to remember every feature. We got away with the gold, became wealthy men, and made our way over to England without being suspected. There I parted from my old pals and Uldie, oro-konvoyo venis de Ballarat a Melbourne, e nic jacis varanta ol ed atakis ol. Esis sis soldati e ni esis anke sis, do la aféro esis pasable egala, ma ni vakuigis quar de lia seil ye la unesma salveo-pafo. Tamen, tri de nia kerli ocidesis, ante ke ni ganis la raptajo. Me pozis meo pistolo an la kapo di la vagono-veturisto, qua esis ta ipsa homulo, McCarthy. Me dezieras a Deo ke me lore par-pafabis il, ma me dispensis il, quankam me vidis ilua mikra maligna okuli fixcigita an mea vizajo, quale por memorar singla traiti. Ni departis kun la oro, divenis richa homuli, e progresis ad Angli sen suspektesar. Ibe me livis mea anciena kerli, e rezolvis establizar determined to settle down to a quiet and respectable life. I bought this estate, which chanced to be in the market, and I set myself to do a little good with my money, to make up for the way in which I had earned it. I married, too, and though my wife died young she left me my dear little Alice. Even when she was just a baby her wee hand seemed to lead me down the right path as nothing else had ever done. In a word, I turned over a new leaf and did my best to make up for the past. All was going well when McCarthy laid his grip upon me.

"I had gone up to town about an investment, and I met him in Regent Street with hardly a coat to his back or a boot to his foot.

"'Here we are, Jack,' says he, touching me on the arm; 'we'll be as good as a family to you. There's two of us, me and my son, and you can have the keeping of us. If you don't--it's a fine, law-abiding country is England, and there's always a policeman within hail.'

"Well, down they came to the west country, there was no shaking them off, and there they have lived rent free on my best land ever since. There was no rest for me, no peace, no forgetfulness; turn where I would, there was his cunning, grinning face at my elbow. It grew worse as Alice grew up, for he soon saw I was more afraid of her knowing my past than of the police. Whatever he wanted he must have, and whatever it was I gave him without question, land, money, houses, until at last he asked a thing which I could not give. He asked for Alice.

"His son, you see, had grown up, and so had my girl, and as I was known to be in weak health, it seemed a fine stroke to him that his lad should step into the whole property. But there I was firm. I would not have his cursed stock mixed with mine; not that I had any dislike to the lad, but his blood was in him, and that was enough. I stood firm. McCarthy threatened. I braved him to do his worst. We were to meet at the pool midway between our houses to talk it over.

"When I went down there I found him talking with his son, so I smoked a cigar and waited behind a tree until he should be alone. But as I listened to his talk all that was black and bitter

"I had gone up to town about an investment, and I met him in Regent Street with hardly a coat to his back or a boot to his foot.

"'Here we are, Jack,' says he, touching me on the arm; 'we'll be as good as a family to you. There's two of us, me and my son, and you can have the keeping of us. If you don't--it's a fine, law-abiding country is England, and there's always a policeman within hail.'

"Well, down they came to the west country, there was no shaking them off, and there they have lived rent free on my best land ever since. There was no rest for me, no peace, no forgetfulness; turn where I would, there was his cunning, grinning face at my elbow. It grew worse as Alice grew up, for he soon saw I was more afraid of her knowing my past than of the police. Whatever he wanted he must have, and whatever it was I gave him without question, land, money, houses, until at last he asked a thing which I could not give. He asked for Alice.

"His son, you see, had grown up, and so had my girl, and as I was known to be in weak health, it seemed a fine stroke to him that his lad should step into the whole property. But there I was firm. I would not have his cursed stock mixed with mine; not that I had any dislike to the lad, but his blood was in him, and that was enough. I stood firm. McCarthy threatened. I braved him to do his worst. We were to meet at the pool midway between our houses to talk it over.

"When I went down there I found him talking with his son, so I smoked a cigar and waited behind a tree until he should be alone. But as I listened to his talk all that was black and bitter in me seemed to come uppermost. He was urging his son to marry my daughter with as little regard for what she might think as if she were a slut from off the streets. It drove me mad to think that I and all that I held most dear should be in the power of such a man as this. Could I not snap the bond? I was already a dying and a desperate man. Though clear of mind and fairly strong of limb, I knew that my own fate was sealed.

But my memory and my girl! Both could be saved if I could but silence that foul tongue. I did it, Mr. Holmes. I would do it again. Deeply as I have sinned, I have led a life of martyrdom to atone for it. But that my girl should be entangled in the same meshes which held me was more than I could suffer. I struck him down with no more compunction than if he had been some foul and venomous beast. His cry brought back his son; but I had gained the cover of the wood, though I was forced to go back to fetch the cloak which I had dropped in my flight. That is the true story, gentlemen, of all that occurred."

"Well, it is not for me to judge you," said Holmes as the old man signed the statement which had been drawn out. "I pray that we may never be exposed to such a temptation." "I pray not, sir. And what do you intend to do?"

"In view of your health, nothing. You are yourself aware that you will soon have to answer for your deed at a higher court than the Assizes. I will keep your confession, and if McCarthy is condemned I shall be forced to use it. If not, it shall never be seen by mortal eye; and your secret, whether you be alive or dead, shall be safe with us."

"Farewell, then," said the old man solemnly. "Your own deathbeds, when they come, will be the easier for the thought of the peace which you have given to mine." Tottering and shaking in all his giant frame, he stumbled slowly from the room.

"God help us!" said Holmes after a long silence. "Why does fate play such tricks with poor, helpless worms? I never hear of such a case as this that I do not think of Baxter's words, and say, 'There, but for the grace of bitra en me semblis predominacar. Il esis incitanta sua filiulo mariajar su kun mea finliino, havante tante poka egardo pri quon el pesnsus, quale se el esis sordidachino de la stradi. Furiigis me, pensar ke me, ed omno quon me maxim multe afeccionis, esis sub la povo di tala homulo. Ke me ne povis ruptar la ligilo? Me ja esis mortanta e desesperanta homulo. Quankam mentale klara e korpale pasable forta, me savis ke mea propra fato esas certa.

Ma mea memorajo e mea filiino! Ambo povis salvesar, se me nur povis tacigar ta sordida lango. Me facis lo, sioro Holmes. Me facis lo itere. Quale profunde me pekis, tale me vivis martiresoze por expiar lo. Ma, ke mea filiino esez intrikata en la sama reto que tenis me, esis plu kam me povis sufrar. Me abatis il, ne plu kompunciozno kam se il esabis venenoza bestio. Ilua krio retroenigis sua filiulo; ma me atingabis la shirmilo di la bosko, quankam me mustis retroirar por querar la mantelo quan me faligabis dum mea fugo. To esas la vera naraco, sioruli, di omno quo eventis.»

«Or, vu ne esas judikenda da me», dicis Holmes, dum le la oldulo signatis la deklaro qua esis formuligita. «Me pegas ke ni nultempe expozesas a tala tenteso.»

«Me anke pegas lo, sioro. E quon vu intencas facar?»

«Pro tua saneso, nulo. Vu ipsa konokas ke vu balde mustos esar responsenda pro tua ago ye plu elevita korto kam la kriminala tribunalo. Me retenos tua konfeso, e, se McCarthy kondamnesos, me musto uzar ol. Se ne, ol nultempe videsos da irgu; e vua sekreajo, sive vu esos vivanta, sive mortinta, esos sekura kun ni.»

«Do, adio», dicis grave la aldulo. «Vi propra liti di morto, kande lo eventos, esos plu tranquila pro la memoro di la pac o quan vi donis a la mea.» Shancelante e tremante en omna sua giganta korpo, il lente, heziteme iris de la chambro.

«Deo helpz ni!» dicis Holmes, pos longa taco. «Pro quo, fato tale atrapas povra senpova vermi? Me nultempe audas pri tala kazo sen memorar la vorti di Baxter, e dicar: Tale, eeepte per la graco di Deo,agas"
God, goes Sherlock Holmes."

James McCarthy was acquitted at the Assizes on the strength of a number of objections which had been drawn out by Holmes and submitted to the defending counsel. Old Turner lived for seven months after our interview, but he is now dead; and there is every prospect that the son and daughter may come to live happily together in ignorance of the black cloud which rests upon their past.

James McCarthy absolves is ye la tribunalo, pro plura objecioni qui esis formuligita da Holmes, e prizentita a la defensanta advokato. Olda Turner vivis dum sep monati pos nia interviuvo, ma il nin esas mortinta; ed esas forta expekto ke la filiulo e filiino divenos vivar felice kune, ne konocante la nigra nubo qua jacas sur lia pasintajo.